OUR BUSINESS SECTORS

ENERGY AND UTILITIES

We are here to help you integrate the new with the current, from the assimilation of advanced technologies to business intelligence and energy innovation. Our purpose? To guide you to stable profitability during an unpredictable time. We do that by taking the time to find out where you're at and what steps need to be taken to correct course and future proof.

We believe in you committing to your future. But that means adopting a new way of thinking and taking on new digital activities. By committing to machine learning, big data and an expanding array of digital products, you will push beyond today's trends and invest in tomorrow that benefits the continent and the world.

PRIVATE SECTOR

At PTP Integrated we strive to push our clients forward by helping them make the right choices concerning technology. It's not only about combatting disruption but about becoming an exceptional digital operation.

By now, everybody knows that to digitise an organisation means overhauling entrenched systems; about introducing new systems, revenue streams and developing new business models. However, these initiatives not only require insight and foresight but an innate understanding of the CTO's need to gain a competitive advantage and sustain digital growth. It is our responsibility to manoeuvre you through the challenges, implementing strategies that shift the organisation so that transformation is smooth and lasting.

PUBLIC SECTOR

In the face of accelerating change, we help public sector organisations to embrace innovation and transform fast-to operate smarter, achieve more and improve services. By leveraging our deep industry expertise and applying it to the specific challenges that public organisations face, we can deliver proven solutions end to end. We're infusing government with the fresh thinking it needs to give citizens what they want.

Across the public sector, we're helping transform organisations to continuously adapt and improve outcomes through innovation.

STATE-OWNED ENTERPRISE

Too often, state-owned enterprises operate behind a curtain, revealing little information beyond their general mandate. One reason may be that their objectives are unclear or conflicting, but the lack of transparency can also be traced to political expediency, a desire to avoid comparisons with the private sector, or inexperience with clear, concise corporate communications. Leading state-owned enterprises can openly proclaim their objectives and clarify the tradeoffs between their financial and social goals when they negotiate a transparent mandate with the government and other stakeholders.

Even with transparent agreements, state-owned enterprises tread on shaky ground. Public scrutiny—and therefore the pressure to deliver quick results and avoid missteps—is intense. Wholesale changes can upset workers and raise the level of political risk. Leadership talent is scarce, and few people have experience executing change programs. As a result, judicious state-owned enterprises tend to begin their change programs by concentrating on a few areas that promise to have the greatest financial impact rather than embarking on a broad agenda that could fail for lack of resources. This focus also limits the possibility that divergent, and possibly conflicting, stakeholder interests will distract a company's leaders from their core tasks.

"At the core of building sustainable solutions is the empowerment of you, the client, teams and individuals to ensure success."
